The whole disgraceful plot is viewed with execution by the Irish people. It was almost entirely a Dublin movement. Partly the creation of the Sinn Fein cranks and German agents there, partly of the remnants of that mass of discontent and anarchy which was left by the disastrous Larkinite strike. In a few small towns there were attempts at disturbance, which were easily suppressed, but Ireland as a whole has remained perfectly tranquil.

"The movement in Dublin is nearing its end, in spite of the amount of bloodshed which it has caused. The affair was little more than the seizure by supprise of a few buildings, streets and houses. It was Sydney Street or Fort Chabrul on a larger scale, and, as in both cases, it took greater time and greater energy to put it down than a larger and more serious movement in the open field.

The movement in the lists was a decrease of $173,080 below the preceding budget.

Motorization Cuts Budget.

Death and motorization slashed the fremen's budget. Fifteen fire companies were rendered obsolete by motorization; forty buildings and sites were given up; and seven captains, were given up; and seven captains, were given up; and seven captains, were given up; and seven fremen and four pilots were released for duty in companies in newer parts of the city. In all, only eight employes were dismissed from the department during its end, in spite of the amount of bloodshed which it has caused. "I am happy to be able to state that even in its desire to play into the hands of the enemies of Home Rule in England the movement has been just as great a failure as in Ireland, for the public and the press in England have remained quite calm. They have appraised the value and understood the purpose of the rebels, and no attempt has been made in any quarter to make capital out of it to damage the cause of Home Rule. "I am convinced that many old opponents of Home Rule will be profoundly impressed by these events and will come to the same conclusions as Irish Nationalists reached long ago—that the one security for good order, as well as good government, in Ireland is a native executive and Parliament backed by Irish opinion, and that if such an executive had been in existence for the last six months there would have been no Dublin riot.
